MILLIONAIRESS LANDBARON ANSHE CHUNG UNDERCUTS MARKET WITH CHEAP GOODS

SELF-PROCLAIMED RL millionairess Anshe Chung has enraged in-world designers by flooding the market with L$10 goods.

The land baron's company Anshe Chung Studios (ACS) is paying in-house artists to create objects such as furniture to sell for L$10 each, vastly undercutting other designers. Chung was even given her own section at slexchange.com, although it was removed after the scheme provoked an uproar.

In a post on her personal blog, Chung revealed the project, called '10LINDENS', is designed to change the SL economy into a competitive big business world, with objectives similar to RL firms such as Wal-Mart or Ikea. She wrote: "We decided to make SL more competitive and more accessible to players by providing high quality products at prices that allow SL to remain competitive in the long run."

STUNT

Other designers, however, are fearful the project will spell the end not only to their businesses, but the whole culture of SL. Luxurious Althouse said: "Cheaper doesn't mean better, but it does mean more people will purchase it. At this rate, SL will become Anshe Chung Universe. Before you know it this little stunt turns into everyone cutting everyone else's throat."

Another designer, Tanner Devonshire, said the scheme would promote a culture that will kill SL as it is today. The protesters have formed a group called 'Boycott Anshe Chung', and demonstrations against the dumping prices are set to be held soon at OnRez Island during a merchants' event.

HELP NEEDED: The Garden for the Missing

HELP FIND RL MISSING

SL PROJECT HELPS THE SEARCH FOR MISSING IN RL By TRICK MERTEL

NEW hope has been given to heartbroken relatives searching for missing people in RL thanks to an in-world campaign.

Three-year-old Madeleine is featured on the ground floor. The SL community rallied around to help the search for the youngster, as revealed by The AvaStar, an impact which helped show the potential support for the garden project.

OWNER: Ronnie Rhode

British toddler Madeleine McCann, who made headlines across the RL world when she went missing from a holiday home in Portugal in May, is among the stories represented at the Garden for the Missing.

SUPPORT

The garden, owned and managed by Ronnie Rhode, is a new virtual home for hundreds of missing RL people. There are police profiles on display at the Remora sim for residents to look through, reflect on and hopefully recognise.

Ronnie, who runs the garden out of her own pocket, said she draws huge personal satisfaction and reward from the service she provides: "Once in a while I get to put a 'found safe' sign next to a poster. I believe four have been found safe since I started this. Hopefully we can place one on Madeleine's profile too."

50,000 ONLINE - BUT NOT HAPPY!

By COYNE NAGY

BELEAGUED Lindens were given a massive boost this week when the in-world concurrency rate passed 50,000 for the first time.

The landmark figure, which shows the amount of residents in SL at any one time, was achieved on September 3, and goes some way to dismissing fears that SL will not prove able to support ever-increasing numbers of users.

STALLED

Some residents have argued that the issue, known as scalability, is a big problem for SL, as the figures had stalled in the 40,000s for several months. When more users attempt to log in to SL than the grid can handle, performance drops and eventually residents log out as a result. This eases the pressure on the grid and allows quality to increase again. Higher peak performance levels suggest technological improvements have been made.

CRITICISM

It also hits back at some blog and RL media allegations that SL is an uninhabited wasteland. The Lab has previously faced a stream of criticism over the reporting of registered users, which now tops nine million, even though they have never claimed the statistic was an accurate method of measuring SL's population.

RUINED

But not everyone is happy about the state of SL's scalability. Jenna Sterling, who rents out space on Azure Islands, said: "Linden Lab ruined it for the actual paying members when they made it free and flooded the site. They should feel more obligation to current 'paying' clients. "I wouldn't sacrifice quality for more clients - who wins? The extra avatars cause such lag we can't even enjoy doing anything because we can hardly move."

ANGER: Jenna Sterling claims Lab 'ruined' SL for premium members

SL SHOPPERS GO FOR THE PLASTIC

SL'S first ever credit card has been released by FirstMeta.

The RL finance company has invested thousands of US$ in the creation of the virtual spending gadget. Since their launch in-world on July 31, 130 merchants are accepting the card, more than 120 residents are using it and several hundred transactions have taken place.

SAFE

Tyra Fierrens, co-owner of FirstMeta, said the card's success depends on encouraging consumption in SL on a large scale. She said: "We're already in discussions with several RL companies providing RL goods to start accepting L$ and MetaCard payments."

Fierrens insisted that customers' RL money and information were safe as it is all encrypted, and added: "We're accountable to our RL investors to whom we have real legal liability should the company be engaged in any fraudulent activities."

NO ROOM IN THE INN FOR FURRIES!

PROTEST: Enraged residents gather while one griefer spams the church with Super Mario pics

PROTESTS AND GRIEFING BREAK OUT OVER RL CHURCH'S ANTI-FURRY POLICY

A RELIGIOUS row has erupted over a decision to ban furries from a SL church, sparking three days of protest in-world.

Notices were erected outside the recreation of the famous Cologne Cathedral in Germany informing virtual visitors they needed to be 'dressed' in traditional and suitable human form before being allowed to step foot inside. Furries and winged avatars were specifically prohibited in a notice placed outside the church on the Koelner Dom sim. The rules, similar to those in RL, caused outrage among furries, with up to 50 residents at a time protesting at the sim this week.

OFFENSIVE

After discussions between protesters and sim creators Seminal 3D got heated, the Cathedral was subjected to two grieving attacks. One mindless resident showered the holy virtual site with offensive swastika symbols. Prominent blogger and furry Vint Falken, who was among the protestors, said: "Sorry, this is SL, not first life. If the church wants to enter, the church better adjust its rules to SL, not vice versa." The ban has raised the issue of how RL religions interact within SL. Toti Lowey, an active member of SL's Islamic community, said: "By having the same rules, you are helping to educate about the religion which is one of the main reasons a religion would come here in the first place."

TOLERANCE

But Carter Gaicobini, who owns Ir Shalom, the largest in-world synagogue, feels a certain level of tolerance is needed: "If a furry came to [Ir Shalom] in a thong or silks, I would ask them to please change their clothing - but not change who they are." Seminal 3D bosses are now seeking guidance from the bishop of the RL church - but the firm's CEO Annie Milestone is sticking to her guns. "[There are] people who distinguish sharply between their second life and their first life. Here in Cologne, we built a region for people who want to live in SL but close to RL. So this is just two different region philosophies."

The film is a documentary which follows Alva on his explorations through the virtual world. Mul-

THOUGHT POLICE TO OVERRUN SL

Mr. Braathens, You must be overjoyed. Your campaign to make SL more like RL is paying dividends. Voice, banning gambling and now age verification.

Robin Linden's blog post suggests more to come: verification may be extended beyond age to gender, name and address. Who knows how long it will remain voluntary? We can look forward to having less anonymity in our dealings in SL than we do in RL. Of course, it may not come to this, but tellingly, the Lindens refuse to draw a line in the grid and say, "this we will not cross". Then there are the unspecified threats to landowners who fail to 'voluntarily' restrict access to content that may run afoul of Linden's vague definitions. 'Broadly offensive' rides again. No doubt the grid will soon be overrun with self-appointed Thought Police, narking landowners to the Lindens. The best part of this latest measure is it will be ineffective. As many have use their parent's ID more readily than their credit cards, as there is near-zero risk of getting caught.

I'm sure it's no coincidence the SL homepage slogan changed recently. 'A virtual world imagined, created and owned by its residents.' The word 'owned' seems to have got lost. Perhaps it will re-surface in Phil Linden's inventory. Without warning.

Maybe someone should start a pool on what the Lindens will take away from our second lives next. Oh, wait, that might be gambling! Can't have that.

GIVE FALSE ACCUSATIONS THE BOOT

Dear Regis, WITH reference to the boot thief ['Boot thief out!', issue 37].

For all I know Bax Coen could be the thief, and not Panjomy, I don't really know. I am however upset that 12 malls decided to kick out Panjomy without any real evidence that she did indeed steal the design of the boots.

It strikes me as very odd to condemn someone like that, without evidence, and an act of ignorance from the mall owners. They should be ashamed of themselves for that, and many didn't even refund Panjomy for the remaining rent. If that's their policy, maybe I should consider leaving the spots I rent in some of these malls. I am also concerned about the way Bax has deliberately dragged Panjomy's name into the mud. It could be construed as slanderous and not very professional. I think it's wrong that everyone is so quick to judge Panjomy without proof that she was the one to copy Bax's boots and not visa versa, just because it was Bax who accused Panjomy first. So shame on the malls concerned!

STILL GAMBLING

FOLLOWING a link on the Lab's spanking new SecondLifeGrid.net to a list of SL businesses on Wikipedia, I came across Bob Perry's Store: "Bob Perry's Store is a company which runs a store and a casino within SL." Now, if I was a Linden, I would have had a quiet word in Bob's ear that perhaps he might like to remove 'casino' from his business description. I'm not sure it would look great if word got out that gambling is still going on.

'DON'T-GIVE-A-TOSS' ATTITUDE BACKFIRES

RL MEDIA BUFFONS SAY PAID ACCOUNT FALL PROVES SL'S DOOM

THE drop in the number of premium accounts for the first time in the history of SL is the final nail in Second Life's coffin – according to RL media blockheads.

Fresh-faced interns and cub reporters lumped with the task of monitoring SL have jumped on this latest news like maggots on roadkill. "Is this another step closer to the abyss for SL?" asked one article, stating that "market experts" feel vindicated in their judgement that the much-hyped platform was always doomed. Right, well we at The AvaStar may as well start clearing our desks and wind the whole operation up then... or, alternatively we could treat this latest outpouring of misdeed with the contempt it deserves and get on with reporting on the exciting events of this ever growing virtual world.

ATTITUDE

But blockheads aside, there are definitely lessons to be learned here. The drop may well be due to the clearing out of dead accounts – but the fact that premium accounts aren't increasing as fast as they could, is largely down to the 'we-don't-give-a-toss-what-you-think' attitude taken by the Lab over its introduction of many recent decrees. That the grid is still laggy and full of bugs won't have helped either.

Philip Linden said at SLCC that quality of service is now top priority. But residents will want to see results soon – or else dead accounts or not, there will be a major exodus of premium members.

LAB ID CHECK BOOB?

COULD Age Verification be Linden Lab's biggest cock-up of all time?

Many residents are claiming that in some countries it is illegal to give out your personal identification number to third parties. With the exact terms of how exactly residents must verify themselves not yet set in stone, it's hard to say what will be illegal and what won't. But, with speculation rife that this first 'voluntary' verification rollout will soon be imposed on all residents, the consequences of this possible error may be huge. Just imagine if suddenly all Canadian residents were no longer able to use SL – it certainly wouldn't do a lot for US-Canadian relations.

PAYING PATRONS AT A PREMIUM

BY COYNE NAGY

DISCORD: Protest against child porn earlier this year in an example of resident unhappiness with the Lab

BAD QUALITY OF SERVICE CAUSES MANY TO DITCH PAYING ACCOUNTS

PROTESTS over the bad state of the grid have finally taken their toll on the Lab - as the number of premium account holders dropped for the first time EVER.

Residents who paid to use SL slumped by six per cent in July according to figures released by the Lab this week, a loss of nearly 6,000 accounts.

ADVANTAGES

The finger of blame for the decrease has been pointed at SL's bugs and other problems associated with the Lab's service - as highlighted at the SLCC recently by Philip Linden himself. Gallery owner Paolo Bade is among those who have given up their premium status. He said: "I don't feel I got value for money, absolutely not. I never benefited from the support advantages for the premium account. Now I just rent a small cluster of private sims for my gallery."

ELDORADO

Bade sees criticism in the RL media as having a negative effect on some residents, but lays the blame squarely on Linden Lab: "They presented SL as an Eldorado," he added. "I don't think many people can find a good life here and I don't see great enhancements in the last year, only a lot of troubles. I was expecting LL to make a step forward in interaction but they only gave us the stupid voice feature instead."

ARREARS

Responding on the official SL blog to suggestions that the gambling ban may have affected the figures, Meta Linden said: "The most significant contributor... was the institution of a process to put on hold accounts that are in arrears with payment to us, and accounts on hold are not counted in the totals."

EVEN IF YOU ONLY OWN ONE DRESS, MAKE IT A SLINKY BLACK ONE!

NO woman's wardrobe is complete without a black dress!

There is nothing that can get you out of a 'fashion pinch' like a black dress or gown. I cannot stress this enough.

If you're on a budget, you need a black dress, if you're rich, you need a black dress, if you can only ever buy one thing to wear to any occasion in SL, get a black dress - although one with different lengths! Here I am wearing 'Sinful' by Rebel Hope, which comes with long, short and medium skirts. Consider it your canvas to ANY look imaginable. Beach party? No problem - wear it short, throw on some flip flops, put a flower in your hair, done! Formal event? Wear it long, add a simple strand of pearls and black shoes, done! Rock event? Funk it out with some wild accessories, crazy jewellery or whatever your fancy, done! Business? Add some stockings, some nice hair, a bag and glasses and a jacket... done!

So from the beach to a ball, a black dress is a must have for any season. Winter, spring, summer or fall, the black dress is the 'must have' of all.

I'VE BECOME ADDICTED TO HAVING SEX IN SL!

I'M SHAGGING TEN MEN A DAY IN SL AND I'M WORRIED I MIGHT LOSE MY JOB

Dear Randi: ABOUT six months ago I started using SL when I was bored at work. After a couple of weeks I became really fascinated with the virtual sex possibilities and began having SL sex all the time. I'm now shagging over ten men a day in SL. I really enjoy it, but I'm worried that I've become addicted. Now men email me all the time, and I find it hard to say no. I'm usually way more controlled and have never been very sexually adventurous. I don't want to quit SL and lose my new friends. What should I do? — P.B.

Randi says: Your situation isn't that uncommon. I'm concerned you could be caught and sacked, as I have seen that very thing happen before. You don't say if you have a husband or committed boyfriend. If you don't, you had best conduct your adventures at home, and perhaps you should join an SL escort service to pay some bills. If you do have a guy, then keep your adventures confined to SL. Either way, be careful!

MAN WANTS TO MEET LESBIAN STRIPPER IRL

Dear Randi: ALTOGETHER I have been in SL for over a year now, and in the last few months I have found lucrative work as a stripper. My best customer is a smart, funny guy who it turns out lives about an hour's drive away from me in RL. I have not told him my identity or anything about my personal life, but now he wants to meet in RL. What I haven't told him is that I am a lesbian and would have no interest in dating him. But he's a very nice man and I don't want to hurt him. What should I say? — B.S.

Randi says: Sometimes it's OK to lie, especially to spare someone's feelings. If you haven't exchanged identities or photos, as far as he knows you're the King of Upper Slobbovia. Telling him you are gay would mean you are actively uninterested in him romantically. But telling him you are married or have taken a vow of celibacy might even pique his interest.

I'M CURIOUS ABOUT SEX WITH BISEXUAL

Dear Randi: I WORK for a large company here in SL. Recently a co-worker and I were shopping at this great little store we know, and were trying on our new clothes together in a changing room. I have worked hard on my look and have expensive skins, and when she saw me nude she started to gush about how gorgeous I am. She then let it slip that she is bisexual, and asked if I would come to her place some time to experience a sex bed together. I don't think I have any lesbian tendencies, but now I'm curious. Should I try it out? — D.G.

Randi says: That depends how comfortable you are with it. If you're interested, try her once in private after you get her promise not to 'kiss and tell'. But remember that you have the right to stop at any time. SL is all about fantasy, and there seems to be thousands of women who are lesbian here and interested only in men in RL.

ALT TWO-TIMING HER BOYFRIENDS

Dear Randi:

MY two alts both have really amazing boyfriends who don't know about each other. The other day, after a few drinks in RL, I tp'd to my boyfriend's house totally naked and did a little show. It wasn't till he laughed and said, "Who are you?" that I realized I'd gone to the wrong boyfriend by mistake. But he totally loved it, and said he was tempted to cheat. I said I (as that alt) would meet him again. I think it would be fun to keep up the lie, but could I lose two boyfriends? — I.F.

Randi says: Probably not, as long as you keep your drinking down before you hit the keyboard. Neither is going to find out unless you tell them. If you want to continue the fun, you could try to seduce the other boyfriend with the other alt and see how that goes. Some people take everything in SL as deathly serious, but if you don't, have fun having fun.

... MAKE A SCULPTIE

MAKING a sculpted prim, or sculptie, is easier than it sounds.

Right click on the ground and select Create from the menu. Draw a diagonal on the ground and an object appears. It is not a sculptie yet, so right click on the object and select Edit. Click on the More button to get the larger Edit box, then click on the Object tab and then Building Block Type. Select the triangle arrow and a drop down list will appear, so click on the Sculptured option and your object turns into an apple.

This is the default sculpture object - they all turn into apples to start with. Notice also that the Edit box has changed, there is now a texture picture under the Object tab which looks like a smear of colours.

The next step is to add colour.

Click on the Textures tab and then inside the colour box, and choose a square of your desired colour. You have just made a textured apple!

To enhance your sculptie, click on the object tab, then on the colours inside the Sculpt Texture box. Your inventory list will come up. Find a texture made especially for sculptures (it will look much like the apple sculptie texture here) and your object will change. For fun, you could pick any texture from your inventory, but be prepared to make a mess!

THIS WEEK: LEGENDARY SCULPTURES FROM STARAX STATOSKY

TAKE up the unique opportunity this week to grab some sculptures by one of the best SL artists for free.

Starax Statosky transformed primitives into amazing works of art until his apparent departure from SL in mid-2006. Although some speculate that he is still among us by way of an alt, there is no way of knowing for sure, so the best thing to do is sit back and enjoy his work. Oyster Bay Sculpture Garden and the Crescent Moon Museum held a six-week rotating exhibit containing rare pieces with free versions of Starax classics entitled 'Hidden Starax'.

Crescent Moon owner Tayzia Abatoir said: "I'm excited that the world will have the opportunity to share in Starax's work."

Although the exhibition has now come to a close, all the Starax works which can be copied are still available - so take the chance to decorate your own personal space with a true SL art masterpiece!

My First Day in Second Life

By Coyne Nagy
NEW DESIGNER
DREAMER WILDER

The AvaStar: How was your first day?

Dreamer Wilder: Trouble- some! I couldn't get past the login screen but when I first got started I got a job as an exotic dancer almost immediately, and it was the cost of exotic dance silks that gave me the idea to create my own clothing. It took me three months to learn how.

TA: What was your most embarrassing moment?

DW: I didn't realise people were speaking to me in chat. It must have seemed a bit ignorant! And like everyone I wore boxes until I figured out how to open them.

TA: What was your funniest moment?

DW: My friend was having a child in SL and we managed to leave her bump behind at a club I was working in, that was bizarre.

INTERVIEW

The AvaStar: What is your best feature?

Naturelle Santos: I think it's the ability to talk and feel good with anybody. It could be the most important person around or the last newbie - everybody has something interesting to tell.

TA: What's your favourite place in SL?

NS: It often changes, lately I'm in Torino Vera, an Italian sim. People go there looking for help and I love to explain SL.

TA: What is your biggest SL weakness?

NS: Laziness, I prefer to use my time here for pure enjoyment, while almost everybody else looks for business.

TA: What's your most memorable moment in SL?

NS: I will never forget my first fashion show. It was amazing, the feeling of really being on stage. I was so nervous my hand was shaking on the keyboard.

TA: Your most loved item inventory is..?

NS: ... my wardrobe! It contains the equivalent contents of a small African nation! And my shape, I created it so I'm sure it's unique.
