AMBASSADOR

Here is one scenario once every year, any resident can vote for a person to become SI's 'resident ambassador'. Obviously there would be certain restrictions. such as requiring voters to have been in-world for at least six months to prevent fraud, and allowing premium users or landowners an extra vote. But do residents think it would work?

Renowned builder Barnesworth Anubis said he would vote for Jack Linden, whereas resident Thomas O'Connell said: "You'd probably need a resident council or congress rather than a president."

REMEMBRANCE Sunday was marked in-world with a two minute silence at a specially-commissioned sim to honour the fallen in RL.

Poppy Island was created by Rivers Run Red for the Royal British Legion to raise awareness of their work supporting servicemen and women in the UK and beyond. ZOMBIE BOTS RUIN SLIMAGE

Dear Regis,

Last week I got a shock. A friend of mine IM'd me saying "Martin, come check this out, vou've got to see this!". As I TP'd over I was hoping to see something fantastic, an innovative project, a cool design or something. Instead. I landed next to a sea on a sim with 65.000 sqm parcel and 75,000 traffic. Next to me should have been another 50 avatars according to the sims statistics. But there was nobody there. Then she said, look under the sea - zombie avatars!" No money chairs, no camping, just fake avatars as traffic donkeys.

FARCE

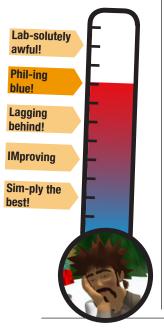

I hate such cheap tricks that ruin statistics and the image of other sims. It hurts those who put hard work into their popular locations, (such as Laguna Nude Beach and Laguna Bay) and generate genuine traffic. A top 20 without the real sims with the top traffic (such as Apfelland and Phat Cat's lounge) is a farce and tarnishes SL's image.

MY EX WANTS ME BACK | MIND-BLOWING LESBIAN BUT I'M ALREADY TAKEN

Dear Randí: I BROKE up with a girl about a month ago, having dated her since my first days in SL. Although we had had many arguments, our parting was amicable. Recently I have become involved with another woman and proposed marriage, and she says she wants to think about it. But just last week, my old girlfriend began IMing me, saying she wants to get back together. I don't want to hurt her feelings, but I must let her know I'm unavailable. What should I do? — L.C.

Randi says: Tell your old girlfriend the truth about your situation. If your current love is stalling about your proposal, perhaps the knowledge she has some competition out there will spur her to make a decision. If she decides she isn't interested after all, perhaps you should go back to your first girlfriend. But don't lie to either one of them, and don't cheat with your ex while you're still involved with your current love.

SEX HAS CONFUSED ME!

Dear Randí: I HAVE had a boyfriend in-world for several months, and at first, our relationship was exciting and wonderful. Recently, however, it just feels as if things have become stale. A couple of weeks ago, when he was away from SL several days because of a RL job assignment, one of my best girlfriends told me she had a crush on me and propositioned me. I had never thought of myself as lesbian, but the experience I had with her was mind-blowing! Since I didn't cheat on him with another man, did I really cheat? — I.E. Randi says: Of course you did! I think you should just keep quiet about it, but if he does ask or finds out about it some other way you shouldn't lie. Perhaps you really do like women, and if that's the case you should gently break off the relationship with him and proceed from there. But telling him you have already cheated would make the situation even worse.

My First Day in Second Life

MUSICIAN TAKAMURA KEIKO

By TRICK MERTEL

THE AVASTAR: What did you get up to on your first day?

TAKAMURA KEIKO: Fixing up my av and learning the ropes. SL is like RL in that vou just have as much fun as you can.

TA: What was your most embarrassing moment?

TK: I've done some pretty stupid things that I would never admit to today. If I did, my boyfriend would lock me in a cage. And. no, that's not one of the embarrassing things I did. TA: What was your funniest moment?

TK: Me and my friend were at home when the downstairs neighbours came back. They were a couple of BDSM lesbians who were both probably dudes in RL. They didn't quite have the hang of the poseballs, and the one with the strap-on had trouble positioning herself behind the other. After an excruciatingly awkward amount of time fiddling, she finally worked it out. I played my 'Applause' gesture. and they

DOS AND DON'TS OF VIRTUAL JOB FAIRS

Bv.TRICK MERTEL

- ♣ Dress your avatar appropriately.
- ♣ Don't look like a raw newbie.
- # Bring a copy of your current RL resume, as companies will want to know about the RL you.
- Arrive on time. Punctuality is important both in RL and SL.
- ♣ Set a good first impression, so you can get started on the right foot.
- Research prospective employers thoroughly before you approach them at the fair.

- Talk too much in the interview. Questions are OK, but overstating yourself can be dangerous.
- Use bad language, be polite.
- Multi-task. Talking with your friends in IM while in an interview can be obvious and gives a bad impression.
- Talk about salary straight away.
- Forget you're in SL, and go for a job on the other side of the RL world which you can't take up.

NAME: TITANIA BRACKEN BIRTH DATE: 4/8/2007 PROFESSION: Club and mall owner ATTITUDE: I can offer friendship, fun and help

INTERVIEW

THE AVASTAR: What is your best feature?

TITANIA BRACKEN: My sense of humour. You need humour with some of the people you meet, and Second Life isn't fun without it

TA: How do you spend your time in SL?

TB: I work a lot, but if I'm not at the club I'm constantly updating things, getting new furnishings, building (badly) or just exploring.

TA: What would you change in SL?

TB: I would abolish VAT (Value Added Tax) for people in the EU. And I would increase the prim allowance on land. Sometimes there are just not enough prims to go around, especially for the shops out there with so many great items that you can buy.

TA: What is the most precious item in your inventory?

TB: My hair, because I don't like being bald! Other than that, my two rabbits which were gifts from a friend.

TA: If SL had a president, who would you vote for?

TB: [RL British comedian] Peter Kay. Boy, the place would be crazy with him around!
